

The half-time show by MTV, aired by CBS during the Super Bowl on February 1, 2004 was lude and indecent. I hope that the FCC will use its authority to severely fine CBS (all of its affiliates) the maximum penalty.

The networks cannot claim they didn't know...they approved the songs knowing that the lyrics of the songs by Nelly, Kid Rock and Janet Jackson had foul language and strong sexual wording that should not be tolerated. The dancing and groping of body parts during the singing of the songs were practiced.

The FCC was created to help protect our society, children and adults from indecent material. USE your legal authority to impose severe penalties on the CBS and its owner, VIACOM.

Thank you. A. Berg
